Questions 9 – 15 are based on the following passage. Choose the best answer for each question.

Movie Review of the Week

Payback

In the spring of 2017, Scott Matthew, a motorist, was brutally beaten by three police officers after a high speed chase. He was dumped in the back alley of an abandoned building. Unfortunately for the officers, the victim survived and the officers were charged. However, there was no strong evidence to support the victim's claim- until someone came forward with a video recording of the incident. What follows is a high stake courtroom drama where everyone involved would do whatever it takes to protect themselves.

6. From the movie review, which of the following is true?
- A The police officers managed to prove their innocence in the court
 - B Someone died in the incident
 - C Someone recorded the incident
 - D The police officers beat Scott Matthew to protect themselves

[Time suggested : 50 minutes]

Questions 26 -31 are based on the following passage.

- 1 On a recent morning in Clearwater, Florida, Maja Kazazic peered down into a 73,000- gallon aquarium. For two years, she had been watching the injured bottlenose dolphin named Winter swim around the tank. From a distance, the dolphin seemed friendly enough. Slowly, the young woman eased herself into the nearby pool. Despite her fear, she felt strong wearing her new leg. She was ready to fulfil a pledge that was made a long time ago – when she was in her second grade and she lost her five-year-old cousin, Jasmina, to leukemia. 5
- 2 After Jasmina’s death, Kazazic vowed she would honour the little girl by swimming with a dolphin, an animal that both girls adored. “Jasmina never got the chance to do it,” says Kazazic, 32, “so I decided that someday I’d do it for her.” In high school, sports, basketball and tennis were Kazazic’s passion. She planned to become a professional athlete. Then in 1993, during the Bosnian civil war, a mortar shell fired by Croat protestors exploded in the courtyard of her building. The six friends she had been chatting with were killed; 16-year-old Kazazic was badly injured – left arm and both legs pierced by shrapnel. 10
- 3 At a makeshift hospital, her left leg was deemed beyond repair and amputated just below the knee. “There was no anaesthesia,” she recalled. “They tied me down and put a piece of rubber in my mouth to bite on. I could feel everything.” Her leg wound became infected; without antibiotics, she drifted in and out of consciousness. For weeks, her parents kept watch by her bed. British activist Sally Becker, who evacuated many children during the war, arranged to bring Kazazic to the United States for treatment. 15
- 4 Kazazic spent nearly two years in a hospital in Cumberland, Maryland, watched over by volunteers from Veterans for Peace. A few months in, Kazazic received her first artificial leg. As there was so little bone left, the prosthesis was hard to fit, and with her right leg also damaged, walking was intensely painful. Nonetheless, she managed to graduate from a local high school. At 18, she left the hospital and moved into an apartment with a fellow refugee. 20
- 5 Her parents finally joined her in Maryland, but Kazazic was already fiercely independent. After receiving a BA in psychology at Saint Francis University in Pennsylvania, she moved to Florida’s Gulf Coast, landing a job at an insurance firm and eventually launching her own website development company. After dozens of surgeries, she was able to play the occasional round of golf or set of tennis. But she still limped on an imperfect prosthesis, and each activity left her in agony for days 25
- 30

6 To unwind, she watched the dolphins played at Clearwater Marine Aquarium, near her home in Palm Harbour. A young dolphin, Winter, who had lost her tail in a crab trap, caught Kazazic’s eye: “ She swam more like a shrimp than a dolphin. I identified with her.” After one doctor’s visit, Kazazic showed up at the aquarium feeling sullen. Trainers were fitting Winter with a high-tech tail – a flexible steel joint covered in silicone plastic, with a gel lining designed to protect a dolphin’s delicate skin. When they were done, Winter splashed off through the water. 35
40

7 Kazazic was mesmerized. If she could do this, there was no way I couldn’t, she thought. She approached the trainers, who put her in touch with the inventors, Hanger Prosthetics & Orthotics in Bethesda, Maryland. Within ten days, she had a new leg. With its soft liner and built-in microprocessor that adjusted the fit for different activities and terrains, “for the first time in almost 16 years, I was pain-free.” 45

8 Eight months later, Kazazic was ready to keep the promise she had made in honour of Jasmina. She went to the aquarium with her parents and lowered herself into the tank. She held out a hand to Winter, who approached cautiously and then glided away. After a few minutes, the dolphin let Kazazic stroke her back. Finally, Winter nuzzled up to her shoulder. Then the two embarked on an hour-long swim around the pool. 50

9 When Kazazic climbed out, her parents embraced her. Kazazic herself would have shouted with joy had she not been aware of dolphins’ sensitivity to noise. Instead she quietly said, “I feel like I owed somebody something, and now I’ve paid my debt.”

What Has Happened To Lulu?

Telegram @soalanpercubaanspm

What has happened to Lulu, mother?

What has happened to Lu?

There's nothing in her bed but an old rag-doll

And by its side a shoe.

Why is her window wide, mother,

The curtain flapping free,

And only a circle on the dusty shelf

Where her money-box used to be?

Why do you turn your head, mother,

And why do tear-drops fall?

And why do you crumple that note on the fire

And say it is nothing at all?

I woke up to voices late last night,

I heard an engine roar.

Why do you tell me the things I heard

Were a dream and nothing more?

I heard somebody cry, mother,

In anger or in pain,

But now I ask you why, mother,

You say it was a gust of rain.

Why do you wander about as though

You don't know what to do?

What has happened to Lulu, mother?

What has happened to Lu?
