The effects of a long hot weather

Water shortages

- Long periods of dry weather can leave less water for daily use.
- For example, a family may need to store water for essential tasks.

Health problems

- Extreme heat can make people feel unwell.
- For example, someone may feel dizzy after spending too long outside.

Higher electric usage

- People may use fans and air conditioning for longer.
- For example, a family's electricity bill may rise during hot weather.

Damage to crops

- Crops may dry out when they do not get enough water.
- For example, vegetables may wilt during a long dry period.

Discomfort

- Hot weather can make it difficult to sleep or concentrate.
- For example, students may struggle to focus in a hot classroom.

Risk of wildfires

- Dry plants can catch fire easily and help a fire spread.
- For example, a small fire may spread through dry grass.

The effects of a long hot weather

ROUND 1 • DISCUSS TOGETHER

A Hi! Today, let's talk about the effects of a long hot weather. What do you think about this?

B First of all, I think it can cause water shortages because long dry weather can reduce the water available for daily use. For example, we can store water in containers for essential tasks. Do you agree?

A Yes, I agree. Moreover, it can lead to health problems because extreme heat can make people unwell if they do not stay cool. For example, someone may feel dizzy after working outside too long. What do you think?

B Yes, you're right. Furthermore, it can result in higher electric usage because people may use fans or air conditioning for longer periods. For example, a family's electricity bill may rise during hot weather. Do you agree?

A I agree. Another point is damage to crops because plants may not grow well when they cannot get enough water. For example, we can see vegetables dry out during a long dry period. What do you think?

B That's true. In addition, it can cause discomfort because high temperatures can make sleeping and concentrating difficult. For example, students may find it hard to focus in a hot classroom. Do you agree?

A Yes. Finally, it can increase the risk of wildfires because very dry plants can burn more easily and help fire spread. For example, a small fire can spread through dry grass. What do you think?

B I agree. That's a serious effect. For example, a small fire can quickly spread and cause a lot of damage. That's all from us. Thank you.

ROUND 2 • AGREE ON ONE POINT

A We both agree that the risk of wildfires is the most serious effect because very dry plants can burn more easily and the fire can spread quickly over a large area. What do you think?

B I agree with you because it can destroy forests, homes and the environment. Shall we end our discussion here?

A Yes, thank you.

B Thank you.

Things to do during a long journey

Taking pictures

- Taking pictures helps us remember places along the way.
- For example, we can photograph the scenery during a safe stop.

Playing mobile games

- A short game can make a journey feel less boring.
- For example, we can play a puzzle game while travelling as passengers.

Writing journals

- Keeping a journal helps us remember our experiences.
- For example, we can write about a place we visited that morning.

Reading books

- A good book can keep us interested during a long journey.
- For example, we can read a short story on a train.

Talking to friends

- Chatting with friends makes a journey more enjoyable.
- For example, we can talk about our holiday plans on the bus.

Watching films

- Watching a film can help passengers pass the time.

ROUND 1 • DISCUSS TOGETHER

Hi! Today, let's talk about things to do during a long journey. What do you think?

That's an interesting topic. What do you think?

First of all, taking pictures is a fun thing to do during a long journey because photos help us remember the places we see along the way. For example, we can take a photo during a safe stop, not while driving. Do you agree?

Yes, I agree. Moreover, playing mobile games can make the journey feel less boring because a short game can pass the time. For example, we can play a simple puzzle while travelling as a passenger. What do you think?

Furthermore, writing journals is a meaningful activity because it helps us remember our thoughts and experiences. For example, we can write a few lines about a place we visited that morning. Do you agree?

I agree. Another point is reading books because a book can keep us interested during a long journey. For example, we can read a short story while sitting on a train. What do you think?

In addition, talking to friends is also a great idea because a conversation makes the journey more enjoyable and social. For example, we can share our holiday plans with a friend on the bus. Do you agree?

Yes. Finally, watching films is a good way to spend time because a suitable film can entertain passengers during a long wait. For example, we can watch a downloaded film with headphones on a train. That's all from us. Thank you.

ROUND 2 • AGREE ON ONE POINT

We both agree that watching films is the best way to pass the time during a long journey because it can really entertain passengers and make the journey feel shorter. What do you think?

I agree with you because we can choose a film that we like, and it helps us relax, especially during a long wait. Shall we end our discussion here?

Yes, thank you.

Thank you.

PART 3 • SUGGESTED POINTS

Ways to become financially responsible

Make a budget

- A budget helps us plan how much to spend and save.
- For example, we can set aside money for food, transport and savings.

Save daily allowance

- Saving a little each day gives us money for future needs.
- For example, we can keep one ringgit from our pocket money daily.

Track daily expenses

- Recording our spending shows us where our money goes.
- For example, we can write down the cost of lunch in a notebook.

Avoid impulse buying

- Thinking before buying helps us avoid unnecessary purchases.
- For example, we can wait a day before buying a game.

Limit online shopping

- Shopping less often helps us control our spending.
- For example, we can open shopping apps only when we need something.

Compare prices before buying

- Comparing prices helps us find better value.
- For example, we can check the price of a notebook in two shops.

Hi! Today, let's talk about ways to become financially responsible. First of all, we should make a budget because it helps us decide how much to spend and save. For example, we can set aside money for food, transport and savings. What do you think?

Candidate
B

Yes, I agree. Moreover, we should save our daily allowance because saving a little regularly gives us money for future needs. For example, we can keep one ringgit from our pocket money each day. Do you agree?

Candidate

Yes, you're right. Furthermore, we should track our daily expenses because writing our spending down shows where our money goes. For example, we can record the cost of lunch in a notebook. What do you think?

Candidate
B

I agree. Another point is that we should avoid impulse buying because thinking first helps us avoid buying things we do not need. For example, we can wait a day before buying a game seen online. Do you agree?

Candidate

That's true. In addition, we should limit online shopping because fewer unplanned purchases make spending easier to control. For example, we can only open shopping apps when a needed item is on the list. What do you think?

Candidate
B

Yes. Finally, we should compare prices before buying because the same kind of item may cost less in another shop. For example, we can check the price of a notebook in two shops. That's all from us. Thank you.
